HSTREET PROPERTY REALTIES ACTIVE WILLIAM H. MAY, GROWING IN VALUE

Hitherto Residential Section.

SOME SALES MADE AT LARGE FIGURES

Demand Increases as Building Operations in Vicinity Extend.

The continual encroachment of Wash ington's business and financial district upon streets hitherto recognized as strictly residential in character, is strikingly illustrated in the transformation now taking place in H street, particularly that portion lying between Four-teenth street and Vermont avenue.

During the past eighteen months States as widely separated as Vermont, Louislana, and Missouri have furnished the very limited area mentioned.

to give place to the structures made To the student of realty conditions this development is but the logical outcome of conditions. For years past other streets leading directly into this section have been teeming with business activity.

Demand Unprecedented.

New enterprises continually seeking quarters in this immediate neighborhood have served to create a demand for business locations that is unprecedented business locations that is unprecedented in the history of the city's growth.

For several years past the steady frend of business development northward on Fourteenth street has been a feature of the local realty market. Fifteenth street, from F to H streets, has justly earned in recent years, the title of "Washington's Wall Street."

Under these conditions it is small wonder that H street, lying directly in the path of these two avenues of industry, should come into the business limelight.

And Fourteenth streets, bought by Edmund K. Fox, on which he has put a loan of $125,000, to be used in improving the property; the other sale comprises premises 42, 425 and 427 Ninth street, northwest, on which is to be erected the new Imperial Theater. The title to this last purchase has been taken in the names of Simon Oppenheimer and Frederick H. Kramer.

Offer for Shoreham Refused.

One of the first men to appreciate the fact that a street occupying the strategic position, so to speak, of H street must become one of the city's most prominent thoroughfares was John R. McLean. His noldings cover the large area on the north side of H street extending from the Shoreham Hotel westward to Vermont avenue.

It is stated on the best authority that an offer was made for the remaining property on the north side of the same block of $150,000. This property, the southeast, $20,000. The shalned was distributed among the city sections, as follows: Northwest, $264, $36.80: northeast, $10,000. The record of lots transferred during the week by sections is: Suburban, seventy-four; near-urban, forty-five; northwest, sixty-two; northeast, twenty-one, and southwest, nine, making a total of 236 lots.

Record of the various building associations advanced to members $23,709.

More than half the money was advanced on the pledge of county property, the amount being $38,106,02. The balance was distributed among the city sections, as follows: Northwest, $264, $367.81: southeast, $25,800: northeast, $10,000. A broker whose participation in recent deals lends weight to his opinion, stated that in his judgment values in this section were just starting on their upward movement. The pouring of hundreds of thousands of dollars into the very limited area referred to, can mean but one thing—that H street is destined to play a most prominent part in the business and financial history of the National Capital.
